Kia Ora

What a year! Our biggest milestone for 2018 is something we've had in the works for 6 years: the grand opening of our new central library, Tūranga. If you haven't been yet, you're in for a treat.

In other news, here are some of the most interesting 'mosts' of the year*:

- Most popular book: Past Tense by Lee Child
- Most popular eBook: The Handmaid's Tale by Margaret Atwood
- Most popular eMagazine: New Zealand Listener
- Most visited library: Fendalton Library (368,064 visits)
- Library with the most issues: South Library (485,073 items borrowed)
- Most popular eResource: OverDrive Books (202,359 downloads)
- Most popular event: Tūranga Opening Day (2,939 attendees)

On a different note, I'd like to say farewell to Anne Anderson, our wonderful Content Manager, who retired in mid-November. If you've enjoyed a freshly-released item in the last few years, you have Anne and her team to thank for picking it out. We wish her the very best for her future.

Finally, if you're looking for summer reading inspiration, I encourage you to check out our stellar 'Best Reads 2018' list as well as take part in this year's Summertime Reading Challenge.

Te Kerēme, a Ngāi Tahu perspective A Waitangi presentation

Waitangi Day is the commemoration of the birth of our nation, and an important day in our collective history. However, much of this history is unknown. Did you know that unlike many northern Iwi (tribes), Ngāi Tahu did not sign the Treaty of Waitangi / te Tiriti o Waitangi on the 6th February at Waitangi? It was signed at three locations here in Te Waipounamu (the South Island) in June 1840. Ruapuke, Ōtakou and our very own Ōnuku, here on Te Pātaka a Rakaihautū (Banks Peninsula), just south-east of Akaroa.

Ratonga Māori (Māori Library Services) are providing an opportunity for our community to come and learn more about local history relating to the signing of the Treaty / te Tiriti, what lead up to the signing and the impact that followed. Come along, listen and discover some of the beautiful resources held in our library collections.

Composed into a digital mindmap of Christchurch, this unique experience is on a massive touch screen wall located on He Hononga | Connection the ground floor of Tūranga. Multiple users can explore the past and present of our city on this digital interface and can comment on and share images with others. It is created from over 1000 cut-out 'Hero' images of buildings, streets, landscapes, events and people to generate a collage that users can explore at the touch of a finger. Several thousand more images are available to explore through the Heroes and search functionality.

The Discovery Wall is accompanied by a website at discoverywall.nz where the images can be explored and searched, commented on and shared. This is where you can also contribute your own images and stories to the collection.

Best of 2018

Librarians pick their 2018 favourites. Go to my.christchurchcitylibraries.com/books-and-reading/ for more top books, movies, and music – and tell us about YOUR 2018 faves!

Jane's pick :

Silence of the Girls by Pat Barker

"A new take on Achilles and the sacking of Troy – focusing on the women who have largely been ignored. A rollicking story that you will want to finish quickly and then regret that you did!"

Ray's pick:

Exit West by Mohsin Hamid

"A timely, important and beautiful novel about refugees and magical doors."

Jo's pick:

The Spotted Dog by Kerry Greenwood

"I love Kerry Greenwood's Corinna Chapman series of mysteries... Definitely the enjoyable light read I needed in a stressful year. If you liked the Phryne Fisher mysteries, I thoroughly recommend giving the Corinna Chapman series a go."

Alina's pick:

Spinning Silver by Naomi Novik

"Fairytale echoes abound in these intertwining narratives set in a cold winter in the north where all debts must be repaid."

Fee's pick:

Sleeping Beauties by Stephen and Owen King

"A tough choice! I pick this book because it ticks all the boxes - great story concept; will women choose to live in a world without men?"

Mark's pick:

Alt-America: The Rise of the Radical Right in the Age of Trump by David Neiwert

"A must read for political-trainspotters trying to understand the seemingly indecipherable emergence of not only Trump, but the re-emergence of the radical right in the American political scene that is well written, well researched, and at times harrowing. Laugh at the absurdity - or despair at the malice - of Alt-America."

Melinda's pick:

The Third Hotel by Laura van den Berg.

"Secrets, marriage and the madness of grief are explored in this surreal and beautifully written novel as Clare pursues her recently deceased husband through the streets of Havana."

Simon's pick:

American Utopia by David Byrne [music]

"David Byrne's latest is both ambitious and accessible mixing politics with a determined optimism that is a pure delight."

Guest pick: Rachael King, programme director of WORD Christchurch

The Cost of Living by Deborah Levy

"The Cost of Living was the perfect book to be reading as I came off the intensity of the festival and started thinking about my own creative and writing life. It's a slim, intensely distilled, thoughtful and deeply feminist memoir-in-essays about writing, motherhood, and how your world shifts and settles around you after a marriage ends. It's really hard to pinpoint why it affected me so deeply, but I have heard similar responses from other women my age who are writers and I have recommended it to anyone who will listen. It's the second in a proposed trilogy - needless to say I went straight out and bought the first volume, Things I Don't Want to Know, which I'm saving for the holidays."

Dan's pick:

Flames by Robbie Arnott

"This is an astonishingly good book. It's elemental, blurs the lines between reality and mythology, sweeps you up in atmosphere and the sense of place, and the use of language is sublime."

Karen's pick:

Wind River (movie)

"Inspired by true events - a very strong, emotive, quality mystery murder set amidst the desolation of the Wind River Indian Reservation where only the strong survive in this stark and brutal wilderness. Compelling drama with powerfully restrained performances from Jeremy Renner, Elizabeth Olsen and Graham Greene."

Alina's pick:

Normal People by Sally Rooney

"Long listed for the Man Booker Prize, a story about a turbulent relationship set over several years. As the relationship is far from normal, are Marianne and Connell normal people?"

Imagination Station

Imagination Station is now open in Tūranga! Come and visit us in our bright and bold new play area on Hapori | Community (level one).
