

Apl. 1. Sunday. fine. S. W. to school & church as usual; Mr. Hall preached an excellent sermon at St Luke's in the morning, subject the "cross of Christ." It was our Missionary Sunday, so I read a few extract's on Missionary labours etc., in the afternoon I encouraged them to persevere, in collecting all they could for so good a cause & to try & outlive St Michael's School. I quite enjoyed myself.

After school I walked part of the way home with Mr. White, & called to see Mr. M. Freestone.

I then found my beloved, Mr. Mountain, Tighly & Quill All well, & they seemed to be enjoying themselves much, for the stable was decked with wines & delicious fruits, - but I fell out of my element it being Sunday evening.

After tea, we all went out in the garden & enjoying the cool refreshing breeze for a time, we then returned in, Frank soon left, having an appointment. Presently a neighbour called in & asked Mr. Freestone to go for Dr. Reid so off they all started leaving Mr. Freestone, Emma & myself, we spent the time talking & reading, lines of poetry composed by Mr. Freestone, on their return, business was talked & soon practical experiments were tried & to Digby sent me to sleep; "Sunday evening" ~~sight~~ will not that cry out against me, for myself alone was to blame, what an example, crucifying my Lord afull. We soon left, but with what feelings, happy feelings where gone, & misery - refined, made the more to form the pain caused my beloved, we walked home in silence, Poor girl how I fell for her & pitied her, & yet I - I had done it all, I prayed - & that prayer was answered for both our spirits where calmed, & we parted quite happy again. But that night is a lesson & a warning ^{against} Sunday visiting, for the spirit suffered & conciente, would not let the body rest.
