

Edna was expecting hers, she told me. Bina would be having another, to be "in the swim." It seems the fashion to have babies now.

Well, this letter will be a very short one, I'm afraid. I told you of my visit to the Pyramids in my last letter. I haven't been to Cairo since, on leave, but have visited another town called Helwan. Here I visited the "Japanese Gardens" of about 6 acres; very quaint & unusual with lily ponds & umbrella like structures under which one may sit. I bought 6 oranges from a passing native fruit vendor, sat on a seat, while Egyptian music issued from loud speakers placed here & there in the gardens. You've never heard such music: enough to give one the stomach ache.
