here. That is, I have moved up from Base Camp to my present abode in the desert.

It is quite different here from any previous camp I have been in. We live in "dug-outs", properly sand-bagged & covered over, & although we haven't any of the conveniences we had before, we are making the best of it & are quite happy. It is indeed amazing how well one manages in the desert. The meals are first class, cooked & eaten in the open as there is no shelter above ground whatever. It is wonderful how the cooks manage with so little at their command. Yet we get very good stew, rissoles, potatoes & onions, jam tart & vice, porridge, bread & jam & cheese, & plenty of tea.

In our quarters underground, I have three mates. They are all
