when the big gate was shut, but it would be next to impossible for a camel to get through. In the old city we saw an old inn, with the stalls on the ground floor, a ladder leading up to a balcony running round each side with rooms for sleeping above. This inn led off from a street, & had a big door with a smaller one let for built into it.

Well, here I am back among the sands of Egypt. We are in the middle of Shamer now, but this year hasn't been hot so far. We may get hotter weather next month.

I will close now & see if I can squeeze all these pages into one envelope. I am, I hope you all in health & all the same.

Love to you all
from your loving
son,
Hewari
